

ABSTRACT

A method for controlling or discouraging the roosting and nesting of birds such as pigeons on structures is disclosed. Roosting zones and nesting zones on the structure are identified and covered by a slide with a slick outer surface attached to produce a sloped face. The slide may be a polyhedron that caps a horizontal surface or a sheet that follows a natural slope in the structure.